

Cybele Forest Lodge

Deep in the heart of the forest, you'll find an old hunting lodge called Cybele Forest Lodge: 300 acres of African paradise surrounded by timber plantations, mountains and meadows. The lodge is within easy reach of Johannesburg and you really couldn't choose a more comfortable base from which to explore the surrounding countryside. Only a short distance away are the spectacular attractions of the area such as God's Window, Bourkes Luck Potholes and the Blyde River Canyon. Accommodation at the lodge is limited to 28 people, and each of the various suites, cottages and studios has been individually decorated and personalised. Most include sitting rooms, some private walled patios and yet another has a private sauna. All the suites have their own private swimming pools, and all the cottages and suites have log fireplaces with a plentiful supply of wood so that in winter you can drift off to the soothing sound of logs crackling in the fireplace. The scenery is breathtaking and this really is magnificent riding country. If you prefer something a little less strenuous, Stroll down to the river through the forest where the wild bushbuck live in the thickets. This is a birdwatcher's delight and there are many different varieties to be seen - from colourful sunbirds and kingfishers to purple crested louries and fish eagles. Borrow some of our tackle and try your hand at catching some plump rainbow trout from the river which is stocked for the use of Cybele's guests.
